MARIE BRIZARD®

A LONG HISTORY

AN EXPERT LIQUEUR MAKER

Since 1755

In 1755, Marie Brizard, a daring Bordeaux merchant, developed the recipe for her famous Anisette liqueur. After many trials, she succeeded in finding this incomparable taste, a subtle marriage of eleven plants and spices that gives it an elegant, fresh and powerful flavor.

Marie Brizard & Fils

A lot has changed since Marie Brizard's inception. For starters, it's expanded from the anisette to over 60 products, including syrups, flavored liqueurs, essential oils and more.

"Unlike other anise-based spirits, Marie Brizard's is made from green anise, which brings the liqueur a fresher and lighter taste compared to products made with star anise," explains Angelini. "[It contains] 10 other plants and spices, like dill from India, coriander from Ukraine, fresh lemon peel from Spain and many others."

The mission of Marie Brizard is – and always has been – to "fight cocktail democratization" and gift the most refined and curious palettes with high quality products full of complexity and surprise. Seeing as how the brand's won over 50 medals in global liqueur competitions since 2011 (that's more than any other brand), they're certainly living up to that mission.

Marie Brizard finalizes the definitive recipe for the famous Anisette liqueur. King Louis XV orders Anisette for Versailles's banquets.

It's one thing to be passionate about something, but it's quite another to be really good at it. Marie Brizard became the first French Master Liqueurist, and her Anisette was so beloved that it was even regularly sipped by members of Louis XV's court. Fast forward roughly 260 years and 10 generations later, and her brand – which is still family-owned, by the way – continues to thrive.
